Global design firm Gensler is moving into a creative new space in the Theatre District.

Their new offices will be designed for a "new way of working," with an "agile floorplate that allows the firm to build creative communities" linked by an internal staircase surrounded by collaboration and meeting spaces.

"Broadway serves as a lifeline running through our city, knitting together the unique fabrics that make up New York – it could be called the most iconic street in the world," said Rocco Giannetti, co-managing director of Gensler's New York office. Set on the second through the sixth floors at 1700 Broadway, the 120,000-square-foot space will have great views of the busy street life.
